NEWS

Gold price nears record high on weak US Dollar- Gold price extended its weekly gains, poised to challenge the all-time high of $2,790 rather sooner than later. Comments by United States (US) President Donald Trump could be the catalyst that pushes the yellow metal higher, though he surprised traders as he might refrain from imposing duties on Chinese products. The XAU/USD trades at $2,772, up 0.60%. The market mood shifted slightly negatively even though Trump has eased the trade policy rhetoric against allies and adversaries. US economic data on Friday hinted that manufacturing activity improved in December, according to S&P Global, while Consumer Sentiment deteriorated, reported the University of Michigan (UoM) final survey for January.

However, Trump's harsh rhetoric is not limited to the trade deficit. At the World Economic Forum (WEF) he added that he would demand lower interest rates. After his remarks, the Greenback tumbled and remains on the defensive, as seen by the US Dollar Index (DXY), which tracks the American currency's value against a basket of six currencies. It edges down 0.62% to 107.44. The buck is set to end the week with losses of 1.77% in the first week of US President Donald Trump in office. Next week, the US economic docket will feature the release of Durable Goods Orders, the Federal Reserve's (Fed) interest rate decision, Gross Domestic Product (GDP) figures and the Fed's preferred inflation gauge, the Core Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) Price Index.

Trump sends oil prices lower- Oil prices came under pressure yesterday after President Trump's virtual address at the World Economic Forum at Davos, where he called for lower oil prices. The president said he would ask Saudi Arabia and OPEC members to bring prices down by increasing output. Trump said that lower oil prices could be used as a way to pressure Russia and help bring an end to the war in Ukraine, ING's commodity analyst Warren Patterson notes.

Oil prices trades lower after President Trump's speech at WEF

"In his previous term, President Trump was very vocal about OPEC needing to pump more oil. However, with Russia becoming increasingly more aligned with OPEC members through the OPEC+ alliance, as well as higher fiscal breakeven oil prices for key members, it will be no easy task to convince OPEC to increase output. According to the IMF, Saudi Arabia is estimated to have a fiscal breakeven oil price just shy of US$91/bbl. Furthermore, lower oil prices would also be an obstacle to significantly increasing US oil production."

"The EIA's weekly oil report showed that US commercial crude oil inventories fell by 1.02m barrels over the last week. This is the ninth consecutive week of declines in crude inventories, which leaves stocks at their lowest level since March 2022. This decline came despite refiners slashing run rates, which was driven by maintenance largely in the US Gulf Coast."

"Refiners cut utilization rates by 5.8pp week-on-week, which saw crude oil inputs decline by 1.13m b/d. On the trade side, crude imports increased 621k b/d WoW, while exports also increased by 437k b/d. The increase in imports was largely driven by stronger flows from Canada. As for refined products, gasoline stocks increased by 2.33m barrels, despite the big fall in refinery activity. However, gasoline stocks on the East Coast fell following the temporary outage along the Colonial pipeline. Meanwhile, distillate stocks fell by 3.07m barrels WoW."

TECHNICAL TIPS

XAUUSD:

From a technical perspective, the emergence of some dip-buying on Thursday and the subsequent move up validate a bullish breakout through the $2,720-2,725 supply zone. That said, the Relative Strength Index (RSI) on the daily chart has moved on the verge of breaking into overbought territory, making it prudent to wait for some near-term consolidation or a modest pullback before positioning for further gains. Hence, some follow-through momentum is more likely to confront a stiff hurdle near the all-time peak, around the $2,790 region.

On the flip side, immediate support is pegged near the $2,760-2,758 area, below which the Gold price could slide to retest the overnight swing low, around the $2,736-2,735 region. Any further slide could be seen as a buying opportunity and remain limited near the $2,725-2,720 resistance-turned-support. The latter should act as a key pivotal point, which if broken decisively might shift the bias in favor of bearish trades and pave the way for deeper losses.

CRUDE OIL WTI-

WTI Oil remains at the back foot on Thursday, but moving at the lower pace, compared to a steep fall in past few sessions when oil price was down around four dollars. Key drivers of oil price were signals of increased US oil production on new policies of Trump's administration and calmer geopolitical situation in the Middle East.

Global oil demand could be also dampened by trade tariffs, which might be imposed on a number of countries, potentially to the EU that would send additional shockwaves through the market. Unexpected rise of US crude stocks (API report) added to negative near term outlook. While fundamentals remain weak, technical picture is slightly brighter.

Daily studies remain positive overall, as MA's are in bullish configuration, momentum is still positive and the price is facing strong supports at $74.70 zone (Fibo 38.2% retracement of $66.98/$79.35 / converged 20/200DMA about to form golden cross), with today's action being so far shaped in daily Doji and suggesting that near-term bears off $79.35 peak, might be losing traction. However, these initial signals will require confirmation on extension through initial trigger at $76.00 zone (base of thick 4-hr cloud) then $76.43 (broken Fibo 23.6%) and finally lift above 10DMA ($76.98) to generate reversal signal. Otherwise, limited upticks would signal that bears might be consolidating for fresh push lower, but sustained break through 200DMA will be needed to signal bearish continuation.
