NEWS

Gold fails to hold gains despite falling US Treasury yields and softer DXY.
Trump's refusal to lift China tariffs without concessions sours market mood.
Traders brace for heavy US data week including GDP, ISM and Nonfarm Payrolls.

Gold price made a U-turn and erased Thursday's gains, falling below the $3,300 mark as the Greenback remained bid and Bullion failed to capitalize on falling US Treasury yields. A de-escalation of the trade war between the US and China sponsored a leg-down in the precious metal, which exchanged hands at $3,294, losing over 1.60%.

The US Dollar (USD) strengthens modestly on Friday as investors digest contradictory messaging from the United States and China regarding potential tariff negotiations. While President Donald Trump suggested dialogue is ongoing, Beijing explicitly denied any current talks. This divergence injected volatility into markets, though the Greenback maintained an edge, with the US Dollar Index (DXY) up around 0.37% near the 99.65 zone at the time of writing.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) registered losses of over 0.32% on Friday amid uncertainty over the trade war between the US and China. However, as news broke that China may exempt some US goods from tariffs, Beijing seemed to have de-escalated tensions. This and a deterioration in US consumer sentiment kept the DJIA hovering near 40,000 instead of testing the current week's highs.

The EURUSD pair was seen hovering near the 1.1400 region on Friday after easing slightly in the aftermath of the European session. The pair is consolidating within a narrow range between 1.1315 and 1.1391, reflecting a pause in bullish momentum while still holding ground near recent highs.

UK Retail Sales surprise to the upside but fail to lift Sterling.

US Consumer Sentiment drops sharply; inflation expectations surge to multi-year highs.

Markets digest mixed trade signals as China mulls tariff exemptions on US goods.

The Pound Sterling registers losses against the strong US Dollar, yet it remains above 1.3300. A strong UK Retail Sales report failed to underpin Cable, which registers losses of 0.20% as the GBP/USD trades at 1.3311.

Silver price (XAG/USD) plunges more than 1.5% to near $33.00 during North American trading hours on Friday. The white metal falls sharply from its three-week high of $33.70 posted earlier in the day. The asset weakens as investors have become increasingly confident that the United States (US) and China will make a deal sooner.

The USD/JPY pair is expected to conclude the week on a positive note above 143.00. The pair surges to near 143.50 on Friday as the US Dollar (USD) has resumed its recovery move on hopes that United States (US) President Donald Trump is close to make deals with number of his trading partners.

The US Dollar Index (DXY), which tracks the Greenback's value against its six peers, bounces back to near 99.75 after a corrective move on Thursday.

"A similarly strong increase in production as in May is being considered, according to informed sources. A decision on the production volume in June will be taken at a meeting at the beginning of the week after next. Even though these are as yet unconfirmed rumours, the cracks within the production cartel are apparently getting larger."

CURRENCY ANALYSIS

EURUSD:

Easing US political and trade tensions lifted the market's mood at the end of the week. The US and the EU will release inflation, growth and employment updates. EUR/USD retains its bullish stance despite ending the week in the red.

The EUR/USD pair soared to 1.1573, its highest since November 2021, but shed over 300 pips ahead of the weekly close, ending it up with modest losses. The US Dollar (USD) was sold off throughout the first half of the week amid panic about the future of the American economy following the latest White House developments. Concerns, however, receded as the days went by, helping the USD recover the lost ground.

The EUR/USD pair is little changed on a weekly basis, hovering around the 1.1360 level. A lower low and a lower high maintain the risk skewed to the upside despite the sharp retracement from weekly peaks. A corrective bearish extension is not out of the table given that technical indicators ease from extreme overbought readings, although their downward strength is well-limited. At the same time, the pair develops above all its moving averages, with the 20 Simple Moving Average (SMA) maintaining its bullish slope far below the flat 100 and 200 SMAs.

In the daily chart, technical readings suggest EUR/USD could soon resume its advance. Buyers may have paused, but there are no signs of an upcoming slide, as technical indicators consolidate well above their midlines. At the same time, the 20 SMA keeps advancing below the current level while above the longer ones, acting as dynamic support at around 1.1180.

Near-term sellers stand at around the 1.1400 mark, the immediate resistance area. Once beyond it, the 1.1470 region comes next, ahead of the yearly peak at 1.1573. A clear break below the latter should see EUR/USD extending gains well beyond the 1.1600 mark. Support, on the other hand, comes at around 1.1300, with a break below it opening the door for a corrective slide towards the 1.1160-1.1170 price zone.

CURRENCY ANALYSIS

GBPUSD:

The Pound Sterling booked its third consecutive weekly gain against the US Dollar. GBP/USD will likely follow the latter's price action and tariff talks in the US Nonfarm Payrolls week. The path of least resistance appears to be upward for the pair, per the daily technical setup. The Pound Sterling (GBP) extended its winning momentum against the US Dollar (USD), driving the GBP/USD pair briefly to levels above 1.3400.

Following the confirmation of a Golden Cross on April 17, GBP/USD extended its bullish momentum and hit the highest level in seven months at 1.3424.

The 50-day Simple Moving Average (SMA) crossed above the 200-day SMA on a daily closing basis, indicating a potential upward trend.

However, overbought conditions on the 14-day Relative Strength Index (RSI) fuelled a moderate correction in the pair to near the 1.3240 level before buyers quickly jumped in.

At press time, the RSI, a leading indicator, holds within the positive territory, near 62, suggesting that the bullish bias will likely extend in the week ahead.

The pair must close the week above the critical confluence resistance range of 1.3425-1.3445 to stretch higher toward the 1.3500 barrier.

Should buying momentum intensify above that level, a test of the February 2022 high of 1.3644 will be inevitable.

Conversely, if the pair witnesses a corrective downside, the 1.3200 round level will be tested initially, below which the doors will open toward the 21-day SMA at 1.3093.

A sustained break below the 21-day SMA will target the 50-day SMA at 1.2934.
